Reform in Healthcare Professions
Adeeba binti Kamarulzaman¹, Tuti Ningseh Mohd Dom², Zahrah Saad³, Muhamad Yusri Musa⁴

Healthcare professionals has been at the main frontline in the recent COVID-19 pandemic, battling through enormous difficulties including getting infected, burn-out, mental health issues, poor resource management and we lost a significant number of colleagues worldwide. Various challenges faced by health fraternity has led to calls for reform and significant steps taken by stakeholders including the Ministry of Health, Malaysia to improve working condition of healthcare workers (HCW) with formation of multiple committees, advisory board and most importantly the Health White Paper to ensure the world class standard of our health services remains relevant, sustainable and outstanding quality.

Healthcare professionals such as doctors, dentists, nurses, paramedics and allied health professionals need to keep up with the changes and foresee upcoming challenges to ensure the integrity and quality of practices for each professions is kept at highest quality.

Keywords: reform, healthcare professionals, sustainable

1. Faculty of Medicine, University Malaya, Kuala Lumpur
2. Faculty of Dentistry, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia (UKM), Kuala Lumpur
3. Malaysian Allied Health Science Academy University (MAHSA University), Bandar Saujana Putera, Selangor
4. USM Bertam Medical Centre (USMBMC), Kepala Batas, Pulau Pinang

DOI: http://dx.doi.org/10.31344/ijhhs.v7i70.514

Correspondence to: Muhamad Yusri Musa, Lecturer and Consultant Otorhinolaryngologist, USM Bertam Medical Centre, Advanced Medical and Dental Institute, USM, Kepala Batas, Penang, Malaysia. myusrim@usm.my